"The FRIENDLY ENERGY of Fort Collins"

I approached this transformer with a nod to Fort Collins Earthday, where I demonstrated transformer painting on April 19, 2014. My personal paintings use a pouring technique that has been inspired by many artists including: Jackson Pollack, Beatriz Milhazes, Lynda Benglis, Helen Frankenthaler, and Holton Rower. I simulated a poured box, by painting on the vibrant drips. The transformer will look like a large, friendly electrical plug box awaiting use. I spent several years living overseas and having reliable electric, aka "friendly energy" on demand, is a beautiful thing!

“Snails are on the move in Fort Collins!”

Each unique Snail has a patterned body and complimentary shell design, with lots of silly smiles. The “Snail Herd” has caused a multi-colored, slime-paved background. The slime paths are vibrant warm colors and a strong shadow under each Snail for easy viewing from a moving MAX bus. This design compliments Ren Burke’s adjacent "Horse Herd". I was inspired by my eight-year-old son’s recent drawings of snails. If I could choose to be any animal, it would a snail - as I would always be comfortably at home!
