

Transformer Cabinet Mural Project 2010
Artist: Michael Allison
Location: 320 Willow and 223 Willow

My concept for this project is to bring positive attention to an overlooked object of infrastructure. I hope to translate the idea of electricity as something other than a commodity. Electricity has become such a regular and expected part of our lives, we often take it for granted.

As people view this work, they will hopefully contemplate and appreciate how electricity comes to their homes and businesses, as well as how it exists within the structure of our universe. I also purposely chose colors that are light and bright to liven up the surrounding landscape. The shapes in the sketch are at once static and mobile, simple and complex, large and small; just like electricity.
