Have you ever felt the desire to “break out”? Whether it’s to experience the change of seasons or to end our work day, we all have the need to get out, explore, or try to change our state of being. You might be wanting to get out from behind a desk or waiting for the snow to melt so that you can enjoy the outdoor cafes, take a hike or whatever it may be that lifts your spirit. We have all been struck by the feeling of trying to break out of our box. That is the concept I intend to depict for the mural project by painting faces that look as if they are pressed against glass windows, waiting to get out.
