

Transformer Cabinet Mural Project 2010
Artist: Mary Harnett
Location: Behind Penny Flats at 204 Maple

The theme of this mural is "Rainmaking." The images are drawn from Kiva Murals located in New Mexico. The murals were painted approximately 600 years ago by the Ancient Puebloan People. The artists who created the Kiva Murals used symbols representing scarlet macaws, rain clouds, lightning, and dragonflies to depict rainmaking activities that took place in the kivas. The scarlet macaws represent the south and the sun which, along with the rain, made the corn grow. Like humans, the dragonfly and the mosquito need rain to prosper and play an important role in "Rainmaking."

East side: Butterfly Maiden holding two scarlet macaws

South side: Cloud Blower with a macaw

North side: Mosquito Man

West side: abstraction of dragonflies, feathers, clouds, corn, and flowers

