

BRADY RYMER and the LITTLE BAND THAT COULD

2009 GRAMMY nominees Brady Rymer and the Little Band That Could “might just be the best-sounding band in children’s music,” according to NPR’s All Things Considered. First class, all-American roots/rock with a feel-good R&B foundation is Rymer’s calling card - he creates a warm, optimistic, rollicking back-porch vibe that gets children and their families up and dancing, and smiling from ear to ear. Kids love the energy and Rymer’s magnetic, good-times-guy charm, and his musicianship is something even the most discerning music-loving parent can appreciate.

Brady Rymer toured and recorded with RCA’s From Good Homes for thirteen years, sharing the stage with the likes of Bob Dylan, Dave Matthews and the Grateful Dead’s Bob Weir, before parenthood expanded the scope of his music to include young and old alike. Since then, he’s traveled the country with the Little Band That Could, sharing boxcars full of rock ‘n’ roll with children and families. Along the way, his five albums of family music have been enthusiastically praised by critics across the country and, along with a 2009 GRAMMY nomination, have picked up thirteen national awards, including multiple Parents’ Choice Gold and NAPPA Gold Awards. The music is in frequent rotation on Sirius/XM Satellite Radio; his tunes have reached the top of the charts on Kids Place Live.

Of Rymer’s live performances, outwiththekids.com noted that “Rymer is making some of the best family music of this generation. But as great as his recordings are, they got nothin’ on his live show,” and NAPPA has praised the “terrific musicianship, joyous stage presence and interaction, and the trainload of great, driving tunes” of the band’s work.

The L.A. Daily News has lauded Brady’s “superbly written songs... an exceptional, toe-tapping collection of music,” while USA Today termed Rymer’s style “genuine roots rock for kids.” The Staten Island Advance enthused that Rymer’s “rock-inspired lyrics have a real generation-spanning appeal ... he’s got a magical quality about him in the way he connects to his listeners,” and the New York Times reported “Rymer’s music has a rock ‘n’ roll heart.” The Washington Post sums it up: “When it comes to entertaining kids, Brady Rymer and the Little Band That Could definitely can!”