A Ten Year Vision
Fort Collins is consistently and broadly recognized as a destination community to live, work, play and visit. Integral to the City’s reputation and established quality of life are the values and vitality that the arts, culture and creative sector bring to the community.

FoCo Creates is the City of Fort Collins’ updated Arts and Culture Master Plan for 2019 – 2029. It builds upon the goals of the first 10-year Cultural Plan developed in 2008, while integrating the vision and aspirations of the growing community. Several themes were articulated by community members through the planning process. People want the arts and creative sector to be inclusive and equitable for all residents and visitors; residents desire cultural experiences and activities throughout their entire community; recognition that the greater creative sector, including for-profit and nonprofit organizations are an essential industry and economy; and, Fort Collins is a destination arts, culture and creative community and should be recognized, marketed and promoted as such.

Fort Collins residents cherish and actively engage in the arts and cultural offerings in the community. As the community continues to grow and become more diverse, they want the creative opportunities to continue to grow and thrive, including and reflecting the community’s diversity. The FoCo Creates Arts and Culture Plan challenges the City and community to keep pace with this growth through continued investment in cultural programming, facilities and resources.

The vision of Fort Collins being a vibrant creative hub and cultural destination is explicitly joined with a sense of community and shared values. Art, culture and creativity bring people together and reflect a community’s spirit and commitment to mutual and diverse cultures and history.
The mountains and plains of the greater Fort Collins region have been home to American Indian cultural groups for thousands of years. An established and enduring source of creativity in the region, the tribes’ rich arts, language, and traditions were and are deeply embedded in their culture and way of life.

Following the establishment of the first fort in the area, and less than a decade after the City of Fort Collins was incorporated in 1873, the first cultural facility, the Opera House Block, was completed in 1881. The building hosted traveling performances and was an important community gathering place. Over the proceeding century plus, the growth of the sector has thrived with the establishment of a wide range of cultural organizations. Early and milestone developments include: the Colorado Agricultural College (Colorado State University today) starting its first Conservatory of Music in 1905; the establishment of the Fort Collins Symphony in 1949; the Fort Collins Children’s Theatre presenting its first production in 1958 and OpenStage Theatre opening in 1973.

Today, arts and culture in Fort Collins represent a wide breadth of institutions, activities and establishments, important to the significant growth of the greater creative community and industries. Reflecting this, Fort Collins was recognized in 2011 by the State of Colorado Office of Economic Development and International Trade and Colorado Creative Industries with the Governor’s Arts Award, an award given to a “Colorado town or city for their collective efforts to enhance the vitality of their community through the arts.” Also of note, Downtown Fort Collins was certified as a Creative District in the Colorado Creative Industries Creative District Program in 2016.

Over the years, city residents have shown significant support to build and sustain publicly funded arts and culture infrastructure through multiple tax initiatives. In 1971, the Designing Tomorrow Today initiative seeded the money to fund construction of The Lincoln Center, the new main library, and an expansion of the Fort Collins Museum into the Carnegie Library building. In 1997, voters approved the Building Community Choices capital tax to create a new Community Horticulture Center, now known as The Gardens on Spring Creek. The Building on Basics (BOB) capital tax was approved by voters in 2005 and supported the newly formed Fort Collins Museum of Discovery and renovations to The Lincoln Center. In 2015, voters supported renewal of the BOB tax to fund The Gardens on Spring Creek Visitor’s...
Center expansion and renovation of the historic 1904 Carnegie Building to enhance its use as a cultural community center.

The Gardens on Spring Creek, The Lincoln Center and the Fort Collins Museum of Discovery have become successful and valued cultural institutions and resources, with great community support and attendance. In the recent 2018 Annual Community Survey, over 85 percent of residents rated the quality of programs and facilities for the three as good or very good. The three facilities also experience significant attendance, with over 350,000 collective annual visitors. The community and the City Council also supported the creation of the popular Arts in Public Places Program in 1995 and the opening of the Carnegie Center for Creativity in the historic Carnegie Library in 2013. The City continues to consistently invest in the nonprofit arts and cultural community via the Fort Fund grants program, begun in 1989, and funded by a share of lodging tax revenues.

The City and residents of Fort Collins have a long and dedicated history of cultivating arts and culture in the community. All of the offerings the greater creative sector provides are valued for the authentic experience and diversity they bring and are also proven to be an economic multiplier, drawing significant economic value. This 2019 - 2029 Arts and Culture Master Plan builds upon this strong foundation and continues to advance Fort Collins as a signature creative community.

"[Fort Collins is] also a hip place that continues to grow as a hub for artists and creatives, who value the significance of community as much as the solace of the natural environment."

- Olivia Balsinger

The FoCo Creates Arts and Culture Master Plan development began in the Fall of 2017 with the engagement of a consultant to facilitate the process with City staff. The FoCo Creates website was established and community input invited via an online survey. Over 3,800 people visited the website, 707 people completed the survey and over 1,250 individual comments were submitted. The graph to the right depicts the community’s response by City Council District.

Multiple stakeholder meetings were held throughout 2018 to elicit current strengths and weaknesses and opportunities for the future. Additionally, two community-based groups formed to support specific plan development: the Cultural Equity and Inclusion Group and the Fort Collins Music Task Force. A Leadership Committee, made up of community and city arts and culture leaders, guided the development of the Plan to completion.

The final draft of the plan was shared with the community in early 2019 on the FoCo Creates website and in stakeholder and public meetings, culminating with approval by City Council on May 21, 2019.

“FoCo is a community of creators. The artisans in brewing, baking, chocolate, wood, metal and stone work, and home décor as well as the creators in visual and performing arts have together formed a magical place of excellence in every discipline. FoCo is a work of art!”

The Vision Statement for the FoCo Creates Arts and Culture Master Plan encompasses 10-year outcomes as articulated by community members and plan participants, including the community-wide leadership committee, subject-specific task forces, participant input from community meetings, and survey results and online comments.

V1} Arts and the creative culture in Fort Collins are inclusive and equitable for all residents and visitors. All members of the community, their cultures and art are recognized for contributing to the strength and unique character of the city.

V2} Fort Collins is recognized as a destination arts, culture, and creative community with robust and diverse cultural offerings. The arts, and the values and vitality they provide, are recognized and supported attributes in building a healthy community. The creative sector is integral to drawing innovative and creative companies and people to live, work and play in Fort Collins.

V3} The Fort Collins creative sector is regarded as a comprehensive network, including independent artists, nonprofit and for-profit organizations and businesses, government, educational institutions, philanthropic organizations, associations and other creative industries. Through collaborations and partnerships, the creative sector and industries are promoted and more visible, supporting an expanding creative economy.

V4} Fort Collins residents experience and engage in art experiences throughout the city, including neighborhoods, schools, parks and gardens, gathering places and the City’s cultural venues. Residents value arts, culture, and creativity as essential to the health and well-being of the community and have access to lifelong learning through the arts.
Defining Creative Industries

For this plan, the definition of creative industries is drawn from the Colorado Office of Economic Development and International Trade. The creative industries include nonprofit, for-profit and independent self-employed creatives. Specifically, the industries typically include design, film and media, heritage, literary and publishing, performing arts, and visual arts and crafts. Best practice also includes local definitions and for this plan we include culinary arts and brewing. “Artist,” “creatives,” and “cultural provider” are utilized throughout the plan to represent all people working in the creative industries and creative economy.

“Regional Growth, and success in regional growth, is really based on the competition for talent. You need the educated, highly skilled workforce in today’s economy to push your region ahead. One way to do this is] attracting and retaining talent through creative amenities.”

Thank you to all of the individual contributors and representatives of organizations and businesses who shared their vision, observations and skills in the planning process of the FoCo Creates Arts and Culture Master Plan. The input received from the community, through multiple stakeholder and public meetings and online surveys and comments, directly informed and enhanced the Plan.
